

SINGLE MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

ISLAND REGION

Until recently Island whiskies were not considered as a separate region, and were included as part of the Highland region. Whisky from the Orkney Islands is still classified as Highland whereas the Islands off the west coast (with the exception of Islay) are now the Island region. Typical Island whiskies can be tangy and full bodied with a moderate amount of peat.

VATTED MALT SCOTCH WHISKY

Vatted malt whisky is the marriage of two or more single malt whiskies. This is not 'blended whisky' as no grain whisky is added to a vatted malt. There has been a decline in popularity in recent years, apart from Monkey Shoulder from Grants.
